RE: Archival search on World War II Sino-Japanese War document and military records

November 18, 2019

At my request, Mr. Daniel L. Smith has provided me with research materials and official documents relating to a particular Chinese Kuomintang military officer [General Wang Yao Wu] who directed key battles in the World War II Sino-Japanese conflict.

Mr. Daniel Smith's work is very professional. He states clearly what to expect in his initial guideline and recommendations. As a result, the search has progressed smoothly from the onset. He uses a consistent and clear template when presenting his search results. For each set of material sent in, Mr. Smith provides a concise commentary based on his knowledge from that search, in some cases highlighting the relevant parts of the search contents. This has enabled me to accurately and efficiently use the results of his search job.

I am very satisfied with the high relevancy of his search material, the ability to explore different avenues for positive yield of information and the timely return of search results.

I have no hesitation in recommending Mr. Daniel L. Smith for his work as a historian.

Sincerely,

Mary-Jean Wong (Hong Kong)

Granddaughter of General Wang Yao-wu
